Counting the Turf.

TRANSLATED FROM THE GERMAN.

"Look here, Mary," said Mrs. Alderman to her maid, who had just told her that the cartman was below with the turf she had ordered, " if that is old Joe again, then you see to the unloading, and keep a sharp look out. He is a thorough scoundrel, and cheated us the last time out of at least a hundred pieces."

"Well, he'll let that be when I am there," replied Mary. "I'll keep a good look out. How many do you take this time?"

"He need only put in a thousand pieces, and may bring more next month; we haven't room for more in the left. Keep a good lookout. The money lies on the table, and for the sixpence which I added to it he may take a drink." " Very well, ma'am," said Mary, as she took the money from the table, and left the room.

In the meantime the old turf-cartman, Joe drove into the yard, and drew up under the loft used for storing turf. He had placed his boy at the door to catch the turf as he threw it to him, and next to him, looking out of the kitchen window, was Mary. From where she was she could easily watch the unloading, and count the pieces of turf. Old Joe couldn't fool her any way. "Well, Miss," said the old man, when he saw her at the window, "how do you do? As lively as ever, eh? We're all ready, and the boy is up there waiting. Thousand, as usual? Then we can begin immediately." "Yes, Joe, as usual," replied she, "but this Strange; how sprightly you are yet, Miss; must be a good while that you are in this house! "

" I? Yes, I belive you," replied Mary, flattered thereby-" next spring it will be fifteen years."
"Fifteen years?" cried Joe, astonished; " my goodness, in one place fifteen-h'm, h'm, h'm-16 17, 18," he continued, counting the turf, "19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26-why, then, you must soon they're going in." be thirty?" "Thirty ?" she laughed. "I am thirty-sev-we all get old, that's an old story, and the world don't get younger. How old do you think I am ?" "Well, now," replied Mary, " about fifty."

"Oh, ho, fifty," laughed old Joe, taking up four pieces of turf, "I have nothing to do with the fifties any more. Last week I was sixty-61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, Nothin' but cats, eats!" 75-but one begins to feel it," said he, stopping

"Your mother, Joe," cried the girl, astonished; "why, how old did she get?"

"She was eighty-four," said Joe, nodding his head. "Yes, eighty-four is a nice old age—85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100. Well, they are up—how is Mrs. Alderman B—, is she all well?"

"Why, we have nt heard anything of that yet." "Well, if she's not dead yet, she's dying. She also complained of her nerves, and they gave her "Well, you wouldn't think it possible-113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133. "I say, Joe, did you bring good turf?" said Mrs. Alderman B-, who now appeared at the kitchen window. "Oh, good morning, ma'am," cried the old man, stopping a moment in his own work. "Yes. splendid turf, this time-as dry as powder-just think of the warm weather." "But count better this time than you did be-

"Count better, my dear madam. Nobody takes more care than I, and your girl is there and looks on. You may count them over again."

"Oh, you know very well we can't count them over again," said Mrs. B---; "last time there were at least a hundred and fifty wanting." "It isn't possible," said the old man, shaking his head, "hundred and fifty-God forbid-151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161,

"How many do you take at a time!" asked Mrs. B-"Four, ma'am," was the answer; "it goes better; see, one, two, three, four; 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171."

Mrs. B- looked on till he had come to 200; then she went back to her room, and Joe straightened himself, as if he wanted to rest himself a minute.

"Well," said he, ,' now we are done with the hundreds, and now we must put up the 50. I wish she would buy the rest of the turf, so that I needn't go further into the city."

"Oh, if we had room," said Mary, "in the city everything is so cramped." "The Lord knows it," murmured the old man, while he began to count, "I wouldn't live in the city—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. You heard of the murder of the apprentice by the locksmith's wife ?" "Oh, Lord, it's awful," groaned the girl, "and a woman of her age, too.'

"The mother of seventeen children," nodded the old man. "Seventeen children !" cried Mary, clasping her hands. "Yes, it's awful," said Joe, with a sigh—" seventeen living children—18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 30, 31, 32. And about what was the whole thing," continued the old man : " about a small sum of money, for which she has made herself and all her family miserable." " But," said Mary, " he's said to have had six hundred dollars."

"Six hundred dollars?" cried Joe, getting ready for a throw; "where could he have got six hundred dollars from. It was for the mere trifle of forty dollars.'

"For only forty dollars i" "Not a penny more than forty-41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50. There, 250, four times makes a thousand," said Joe, clapping his hands a few times, and then wiping them on his pants. "Well, this time she'll be satisfied with my counting."

"Here, Joe," said Mary, throwing him the money, wrapped in paper, "is your pay; there's sixpence more for a drink." "Much obliged; will drink to her health; if you want any more, don't forget old Joe." Saying which, he turned his wagon, the boy came down and jumped on behind, and Joe went through the gate, whistling and cracking his whip .- N. Y. Picayune.

" Sold ! "

A Sandwich Island friend, and client of ours, gets off a " sell " at our expense, which is good enough to tell. Tout le Monde et Madame sa femme are aware, or ought to be, that Carrington & Co.'s General Purchasing Agency professes to procure for anybody, anything procurable by purchase, either in this city, or through our agents in Europe, from London to Constantinople. Our Hawaiian friend, taking us at our word, thus writes, without preamble or preface :

Honolulu, August 24, 1858. Dear Sirs :- Referring you to Hunt's Merchants' Magazine for May, page 651, last paragraph, I beg that you will procure one costing about £10, and send to me here by first opportunity. Your obedient servant,

W. W. SKEINS.

" Certainly," said we to ourselves, " we'll do that;" not doubting that the ten-pounder wanted was a vest-pocket telescope, a screw-propeller balloon, or something with a long advertising description too tedious to copy. It so happened that press of business delayed our ascertaining the precise what, and kept our partner's anxious curiosity, not to say our own, in check for some days! At length we had an order for the magazine itself, and rushing forthwith to Hunt's office, climbed to the third story, and asked first for a copy of the May issue, paid for it, and turned to page 651. We found an article referring to a certain staple time I have to request you to count better. On | in the markets of Turkey. This was the "last

A Cat Story.

A philosophical old gentleman was one day passing a new school-house, erected somewhere towards the setting-sun borders of our glorious Union, when his attention was suddenly attracted to a crowd of persons gathered round the door. He inquired of a boy whom he met what was go-

Nothin' but cats, and cats, and cats. Oh! it was orful, them cats." " Pshaw! what have the cats to do with the school committee ! " " Now, well, you see Bill kept a bringing cats and cats; allers a pilin' them up yonder," pointing to a huge pile as large in extent as a pyramid, and considerably aromotic, "and he piled them. " Never mind, my son, what Bill did; what has and didn't give up, but kept a pilin' up the cats, "Tell me what the committee are holding meeting for !" Why, the skule committy are goin' to hold a meetin' to say whether they'll move the skule house or the cats."

The old gentleman evaporated immediately.

that's an awful thing with the fashionable ladies | did not think very favorably of a performance of -they've always got nerves. You know Mrs. his. "Oh," said the artist, to his informant, " what is his opinion good for ! he isn't a judge of "Well, I guess I do," said Mary, who took a painting-he's a Judge of Probate."

A SINGULAR DEFENCE OF MURDER .- A singular instance of a Jew benefitting by his religion is thus related by Edmond About :- "He had committed a crime almost unknown among the Hebrews of our days; that of murder, and the victim was his brother-in-law. The case was clear, and completely proved. Here is the substance of the argument arged in his defence by his advocate: Gentlemen-Whence comes it that the law punishes murderers so severely, even sometimes to the extent of putting them to death! It is because, in assassinating a Christian a soul and body is slain at the same time. An unprepared being is hurried into the presence of the Sovereign Judge, who has not confessed his sins, who has not received absolution, and who falls directly into hell, or at all events into purgatory. Therefore, murder-I mean the murder of a Christian-cannot be too severely punished. But we, what have we killed? Nothing, gentlemen, but a miserable Jew, damned, according to your creed, beforehand. If he had had a hundred years to prepare for death-you know the obstinacy of his race-he would still have died without confession. Let me beseech your indulgence for a venial error, and reserve your severity for those who attack the life and salvation of a Christian."

This plea was actually successful and the culprit escaped with a few months' imprisonment.
